Presidents Letter

Hi Everyone

I hope you all had a great Easter and survived the 3 day lockdown.

I'm sorry this newsletter is a little late but Steve and I have been a little busy lately.

Well for those that haven't been on any runs lately you've been missing out on some very enjoyable ones, starting with the run to Scales at Tweed Heads We decided to drive down via the old highway thru Kirra Beach its always great seeing people do a double take as they see all the cars driving past and as always the food is always great at Scales the company was also great although the seagulls did make eating a little difficult as Di found out she was enjoying a pineapple fritter when a cheeky seagull swooped down and took the whole thing unfortunately Di couldn't get another one so we will just have to go back in the not too distant future to get more.

Another great run was to The Historic River Mill at Mount Nathan ,we all had hot brakes on the run down some pretty steep mountains where I think we all used low gear (not something that I have had to do before in the Mustang) but it was well worth it the River Mill is a great but busy place we all took our chairs and sat out by the Coomera river and had morning tea before we left to head to the Canungra Pub for lunch.

The run to the Gold Coast Motor Museum was also great there are so many very well looked after cars and motor bikes on display we all spent a lot of time looking at all of them then we headed over to the Stanley Bar for dinner that was very nice. The scenery up here especially in the rain was beautiful watching the mist come over the hills was great.

We've still got some great runs coming up so don't miss out on them , I would like to thank both the Karen's for finding some great runs this year with more to come.

Don't forget memberships are due very soon and the AGM will be in July.

Tracey

HISTORY OF THE ANZAC BISCUIT

Every year, as Anzac Day approaches, people become curious about Anzac biscuits. Maybe it's because the thought of them is a delectable relief to the sombreness of that day and all that it represents.But it is easy to make mistakes about Anzac biscuits, strangely enough. The biscuit that most of us know as the Anzac biscuit is a sweet biscuit made from rolled oats and golden syrup. These must not be confused with that staple of soldiers' and sailors' rations for centuries, the hardtack biscuit.

To deal with these rather unpalatable objects first, hardtack biscuits are a nutritional substitute for bread, but unlike bread they do not go mouldy. And also unlike bread, they are very, very hard. On Gallipoli, where the supply of fresh food and water was often difficult to maintain, hardtack biscuits became notorious. So closely have they been identified with the whole Gallipoli experience that they are sometimes known Anzac tiles or Anzac wafer biscuits. Hence the confusion with the sweet biscuit.

There is actually nothing wafer-like about hardtack biscuits. Soldiers often devised ingenious methods to make them easier to eat. A kind of porridge could be made by grating them and adding water. Or biscuits could be soaked in water and, with jam added, baked over a fire into "jam tarts". Not at all like Mum used to make, but better than nothing.

Strange as it seems, the Australian War Memorial holds in its collection a range of hardtack biscuits from the First World War. So durable are they that soldiers used them not just for food, but for creative, non-culinary purposes. The texture and hardness of the biscuits enabled soldiers to write messages on them and send them long distances to family, friends, and loved ones.

Soldiers also used the biscuits as paint canvases and even as photo frames. One such biscuit features the use of wool and bullets to create a picture frame. Another was used as a "Christmas card" and had a tropical scene painted on it.

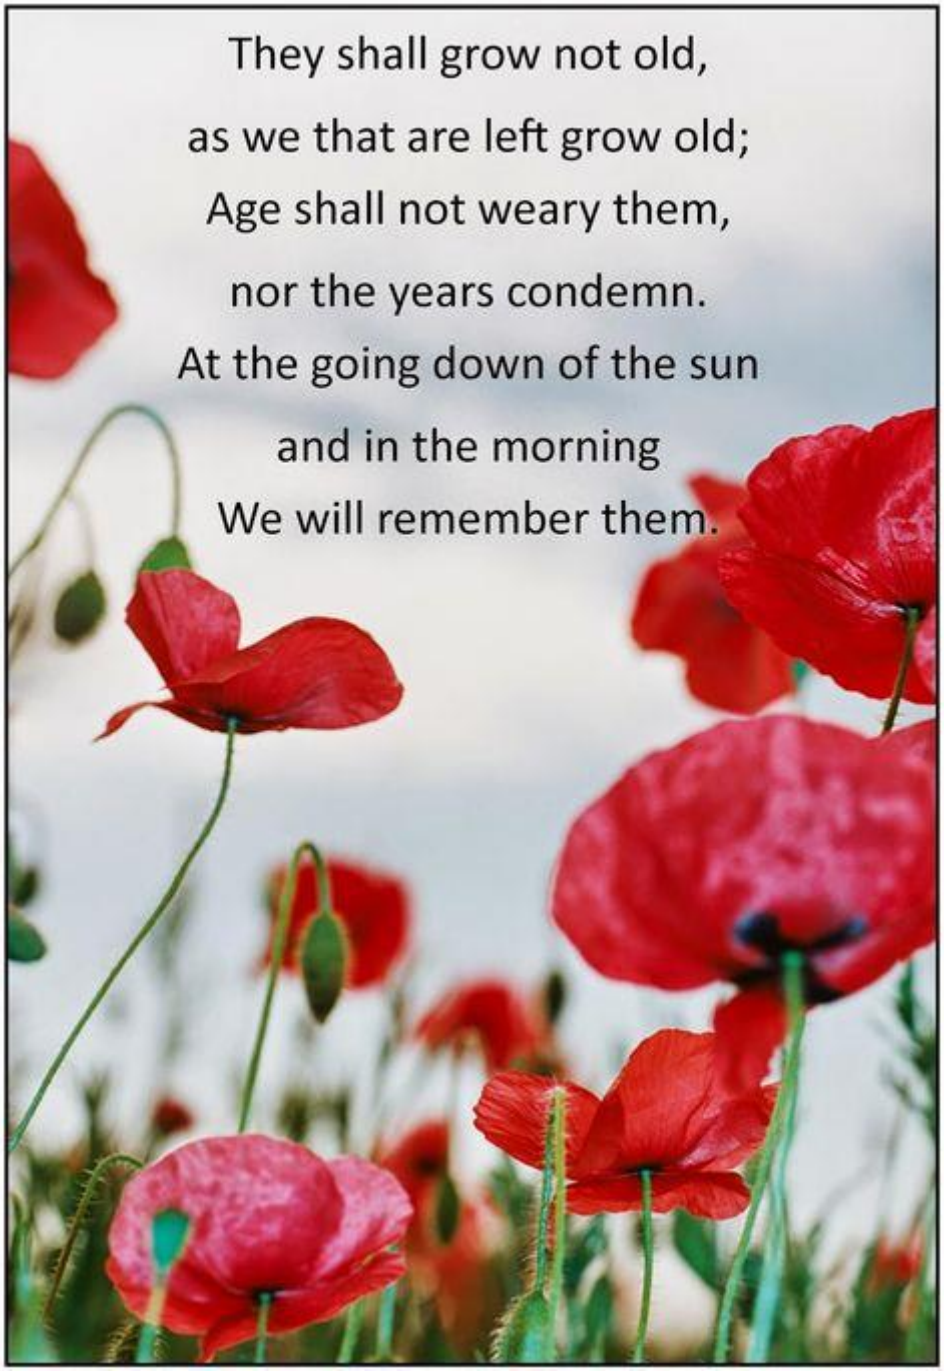
The origin and invention of the sweet Anzac biscuit is contested. Conventionally it is an eggless sweet biscuit made from oats and golden syrup, but these sweet biscuits are not the same rations that were supplied to soldiers in Gallipoli.

From the 1920’s onwards Australian recipe books nearly always included Anzac biscuits but exactly how this recipe became identified with Anzac, or the First World War, is unknown. They don't have the shelf-life of hardtack biscuits but they do last a reasonable amount of time, so it is possible that they became known as a suitable inclusion in parcels of small luxuries and comforts that families and charitable organisations used to send overseas to soldiers.

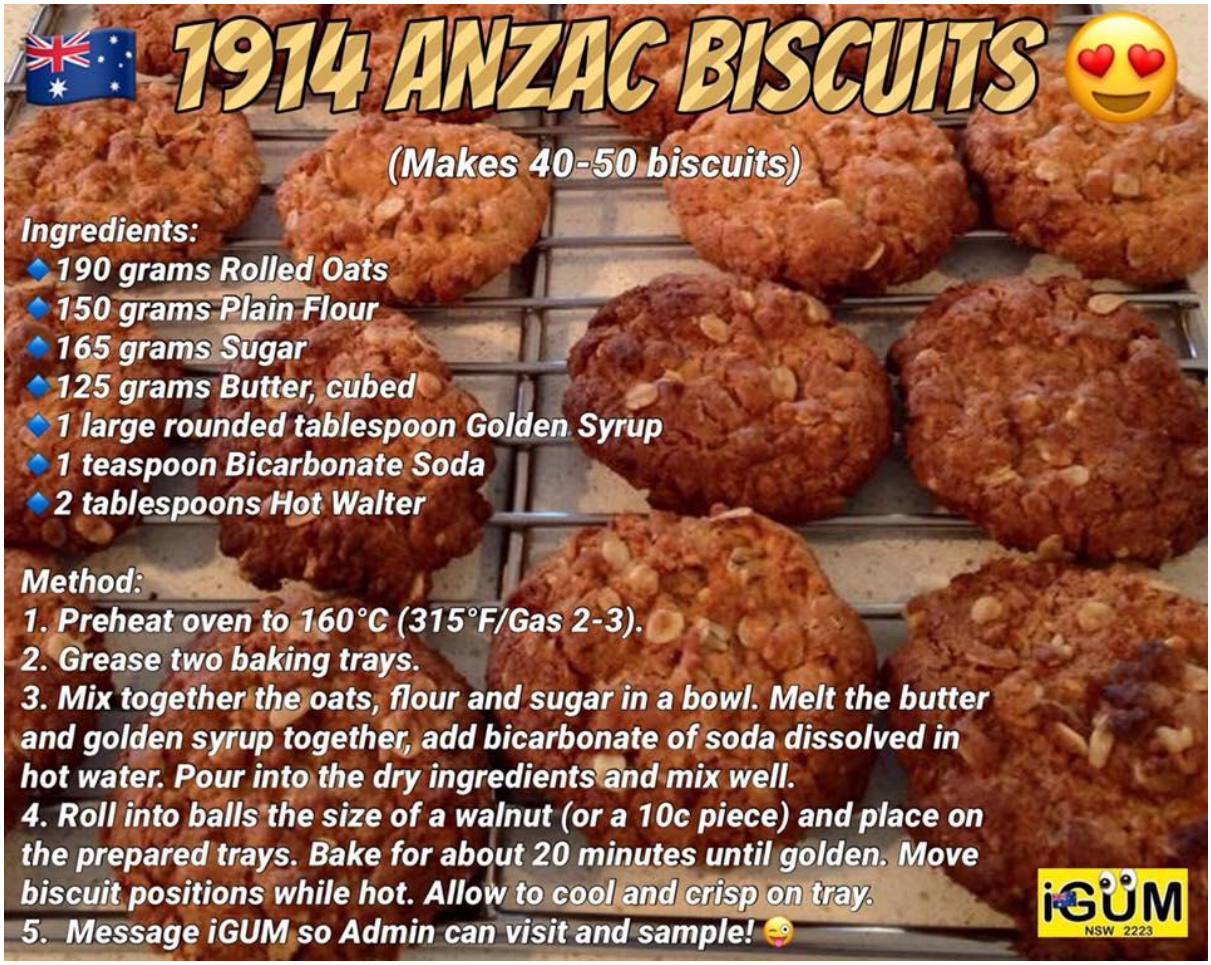
Making Anzac biscuits is one tradition that Australians use to commemorate Anzac day. Everyone has their favourite recipe and there are countless arguments over whether they should be served crunchy or soft.

Although the sweet Anzac biscuits are far more enjoyable to eat than their hardtack counterparts it is safe to say that, with the creativity of the First World War soldiers, the Anzac tile biscuits had far greater uses than just for eating.

[History thanks to the Australian War Memorial]



They shall grow not old,
as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them,
nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun
and in the morning
We will remember them.



1914 ANZAC BISCUITS
(Makes 40-50 biscuits)
Ingredients:
190 grams Rolled Oats
150 grams Plain Flour
165 grams Sugar
125 grams Butter, cubed
1 large rounded tablespoon Golden Syrup
1 teaspoon Bicarbonate Soda
2 tablespoons Hot Walter
Method:
1. Preheat oven to 160°C (315°F/Gas 2-3).
2. Grease two baking trays.
3. Mix together the oats, flour and sugar in a bowl. Melt the butter and golden syrup together, add bicarbonate of soda dissolved in hot water. Pour into the dry ingredients and mix well.
4. Roll into balls the size of a walnut (or a 10c piece) and place on the prepared trays. Bake for about 20 minutes until golden. Move biscuit positions while hot. Allow to cool and crisp on tray.
